CSULB is hosting Transfer Admission Workshops at the CSULB campus. These workshops will work with students in advance who are targeting possible spring 2013 or fall 2013 CSULB transfer. The workshops can also be of value to students who just recently applied for fall 2012 CSULB transfer in terms of discussing their next steps in the application process. Going to these workshops at CSULB also allows our students to visit the CSULB campus and get a feel for the campus environment. There is no cost to attendees and free parking will be provided.

A registration link to the workshops is below. Please encourage your future CSULB transfers to take advantage of this transfer opportunity.

Register online on the Transfer Link located at:

UCLA

UCLA's Center for Community College Partnerships is pleased to announce the CCCP Scholars Program 2012-13. To become a scholar, students enter during the summer in any one of our summer programs and make a commitment to complete all the requirements throughout the academic year.

Please take a moment to review the requirements at our website at www.cccp.ucla.edu to complete the application. Complete applications require the supplemental form, the recommendation form (where appropriate) and copy of unofficial transcripts. You can also review the attached handout that explains the programs, the application and selection process and the different deadlines depending on the summer program selection.

If selected, a scholarship will cover the cost of the program with the expectation of students completing all requirements. In the last few years, students who completed successfully the CCCP scholars program and applied to UCLA, were admitted at a 65% rate or better (compared to the average 28% admissions rate). See handout below:
