MESSAGE FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT-PRESIDENT

Welcome to our first newsletter highlighting Long Beach City College's Pacific Coast Campus!

We just took down the banners that celebrated LBCC's 90th anniversary. But did you know that this year marks the 70th anniversary of LBCC acquiring the land that's now known as the Pacific Coast Campus?

We had an amazing time at College Day this past August as we explored PCC. I hope you enjoyed the fun College Day experience as we visited different areas on this campus to discover our state-of-the-art facilities and the many programs that are headquartered at PCC.

We're going to see a new face for PCC on Pacific Coast Highway when we break ground for the PCC Parking Structure in a few months. Not only will we be adding 530 parking spots and 33 electric vehicle charging stations, but it will totally change the way people look at PCC when they drive down PCH. There's no way you'll miss PCC when the structure is complete! And this construction will be followed by the renovation of MM and a real transformation of the Construction Trades Building.

I hope you enjoy our special issue about the Pacific Coast Campus that just barely cracks the surface about this inspirational campus and the dedicated educators and staff behind it all.

Happy 70th Anniversary to PCC!

LBCC CELEBRATES

LATINX HERITAGE MONTH

LBCC kicked off Latinx Heritage Month with events at both the Liberal Arts and Pacific Coast Campus. The kick-off events, held on Sept. 18 and Sept. 19, honored indigenous practices with food, cultural performances and a resource fair.

The month will wrap up with the Latinx Heritage Month Closing Event: Día de los Muertos on Nov. 8 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the P Building Courtyard at the Liberal Arts Campus. Students, faculty, staff and the community are all invited to this free event. There will be an ofrenda contest, performances from Oaxacan musicians and a free movie screening of Macario. Kids' activities include face painting, coloring, and making paper marigolds. Pan dulce and hot chocolate will be given out for free.

SURPASSES
RECORDS

LBCCD Superintendent-President Reagan Romali and Board of Trustees President Vivian Malauulu joined community volunteers, student leaders, LBCC and City Clerk staff at one of the voter registration booths on Sept. 24.

Long Beach City College students, faculty, and staff joined forces with the Long Beach City Clerk's office for National Voter Registration Day on Sept. 24. Thanks to the combined efforts, this year resulted in a success that far surpassed last year's voter registration.

1,038%

increase in LBCC participation in National Voter Registration Day!

Less than 40 people registered at LBCC in 2018. This year, LBCC obtained 387 registration forms that the City Clerk's Office submitted to the Los Angeles County Registrar's Office. This is a 1,038% increase from 2018 to 2019.

The City Clerk's office managed three registration booths at both LBCC campuses, and were supplemented with volunteers from the Associated Student Body and President's Ambassadors. LBCC faculty members allowed classroom visits throughout the day to encourage new registrants and to inform everyone about upcoming changes in the 2020 election cycle such as new voting machines in Los Angeles County, new locations and dates to vote.

HISTORY OF THE PACIFIC
CAMPUS

Long Beach City College began at the Woodrow Wilson High School campus as Long Beach Junior College in 1927, moving to today's Liberal Arts Campus in 1935. Then in 1949, a second campus was added – today's Pacific Coast Campus which celebrates its 70th anniversary this year.

The first discussion for a junior college in Long Beach began in 1916, a time in which there were only seven other community colleges in California (Fresno, Santa Barbara, Bakersfield, Fullerton, San Diego, Citrus, and Santa Ana).

The proposed location was for it to be housed with Polytechnic High School, just south of Pacific Coast Highway and mere blocks away from what ended up becoming a crucial part of Long Beach City College, 33 years later.

It was recommended that LBCC have a Technical Institute at what is today's Renaissance High School for the Arts located at Eighth Street and Long Beach Boulevard. LBCC's General Adult Division classes were held there from 1945 to 1952.

Maria Diaz worked for the PCC Executive Dean and enjoyed helping students from the 1960s through the 1990s.

LBCC Alumnae and Student Life Manager Jeri Carter (left) worked with CalTrans for more than four years to establish this sign for travelers to avoid confusion with LAC and Pasadena City College. She joined Long Beach City Councilman Clarence Smith (right) on the southbound 405 Freeway to pose for this Press-Telegram photo in the 1990s, despite the objections of California Highway Patrol.

It wasn't until 1949 that the former Hamilton Junior High School became LBCC's Business and Technology Division. The old "BTD" has now evolved into today's Pacific Coast Campus.

The Pacific Coast Campus is now home to several programs including ESL, Child Development, Horticulture, Floral Design, Foster and Kinship Care Education, the Lifetime Learning Center, Performing Arts, Photography, many vocational Trades, a Welcome Center, Workforce Development and the Viking Vault.

The physical appearance of the Pacific Coast Campus is also changing. Original buildings like AA and BB have been given a modern update, and new construction like Buildings GG and RR have been added. Future plans include a new parking structure facing Pacific Coast Highway and the renovation of Building MM.

Seventy years after LBCC took over the Hamilton Junior High School, PCC is now home to the Mini-Grand Prix. It is home to the PCC Mailroom. It is a place where you can find a close-knit family of faculty and staff.

Happy anniversary to PCC!

CELEBRATING CAMPUS CHILDREN'S CENTERS WEEK

LBCC WINS GRANT FOR IMPROVING ONLINE CTE PATHWAYS

The California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office has awarded Long Beach City College with a one-year, $500,000 grant known as the Career Technical Education Online Teaching Improvement Project (COTIP).

Throughout the 2019-2020 fiscal year, COTIP will work to improve online Career Technical Education (CTE) pathways at LBCC through a collaboration between the Office of Online Learning and Educational Technology (OLET), the department of Computer and Offices Studies (COS), Library, and CTE faculty to improve the number and quality of online programs.

"Online learning is growing rapidly in higher education and over the past few years at LBCC our online enrollments and class sessions have increased by 120 percent and our success rates by 14 percent," said Dr. Hussam Kashou, LBCC Associate Dean of Online Learning & Educational Technology and Principal Investigator of the COTIP grant project. "Last year alone, distance learning enrollments increased by 16 percent and distance learning success rates by 5 percent. Distance Education helps meet the needs of our student population and the primary goal of the COTIP grant project is to improve access to, and quality of, existing online courses, to develop fully online certificates, and enhance our online education services for faculty and students."

The long-term goal of the grant period is to focus on professional development, and improving the availability and quality of online certificates through instructional redesign, support services and resources for students and faculty. The project will pilot this process for five certificates in COS, one certificate in Library, and create a framework that will be applicable across different departments and types of awards.

A CTE faculty cohort will be created and will soon begin reviewing pilot online courses, aligning them with the CVC-OEI Online Course Design rubric, and supporting the completion of various aspects of the grant. A Web Development "boot camp" will also be developed to help students quickly enter the workforce and increase their hourly earnings.

Other efforts include:

- Improving infrastructure and workflow of Online Education support services and resources for faculty and students.
- Developing and maintaining new Online Learning Services/Resources Websites for Distance Learning Faculty.
- Evaluating current infrastructure and workflow of faculty and student services for accessing and utilizing Distance Education tools, resources, and support services.
- Developing a Distance Education Faculty Handbook and Distance Education Student Readiness Handbook with input from college constituents.
- Developing and maintaining an OER/ZTC resource website to support the identification and integration of OER/ZTC resources into online courses.
- Supporting the integration of OER/ZTC textbooks into online CTE courses.
- Thoroughly tracking and documenting COTIP project improvements to create a framework for other departments to improve and increase their online certificates, credentials, and programs.

LBCC's Jorge Ochoa Plays a Part in Discovery of New

Passion Flower

Long Beach City College Horticulture Associate Professor, Jorge Ochoa, has been recognized in his important role in discovering a new species of passion flower.

Ochoa's first passion flower expedition took place in 2001 when he visited Costa Rica. Since then, he has been to Brazil, Ecuador, Columbia, Cuba, and Southern Mexico, all on exhibitions to look for new species of passion flowers native to those regions.

In 2011–2012, Ochoa participated in a project with scientists from universities in Missouri and Kansas to do the genetic analysis of a group of passion flowers. A visit to the Dominican Republic resulted in the discovery of a new plant, which was then cultivated and grown at Long Beach City College's Horticulture garden on the Pacific Coast Campus. Ochoa successfully got the plant to flower, which was the first time it flowered in cultivation.

This flowering confirmed it was indeed an undescribed species of passion flower. Ochoa then recorded the flower, measuring characteristics such as the fruit, leaves, corona, and filaments. This allowed the type of specimen to be determined. A type specimen is the first record of any plant when it gets discovered. The study included a genetic analysis to put this new species into a family tree.

This first record is the type specimen, which was then deposited in the Missouri Botanic Gardens Herbarium. And as of this writing (early October) Passiflora intricata is again flowering at the LBCC Horticulture Garden.

“Having the record of the flower, the flower verified it was indeed a new species,” said Ochoa. “The next step was to enter it for publication so it would be accepted as a new plant.”

It is common practice that when a new species has been determined/accepted into the scientific community, it must be published.

Ochoa’s work has now resulted in the discovery and publication of “Passiflora intricata” an apetalous (having no petals) new species from the Dominican Republic. The name “intricata” comes from the Latin word for tangled, which is reference to the flower’s long and slender filaments that look tangled (see photos). The discovery was recognized by the peer-reviewed scientific journal Phytotaxa.

LONG BEACH CITY COLLEGE PRESENTS

DIVERSITY SPEAKERS SERIES

in collaboration with the Anti-Defamation League Orange County/Long Beach

NOBODY IS BORN A BIGOT

Speaker: Rabbi Peter Levi

OCTOBER 30, 2019 | LAC, T-1200 | 12 PM - 1:30 PM

With Americans across the country reporting sustained increases in hate incidents and crimes year after year, we ask where does this hate and bigotry come from and why now? This talk will explore the current trends, how bias can be weaponized, and the extremist recruitment efforts on campuses and in communities.

EXAMINING POWER AND PRIVILEGE

Speaker: Shannon McGowan, Ph.D.

FEBRUARY 20, 2020 | LAC, T-1200 | 12 PM - 1:30 PM

In this collaborative workshop, participants will explore the ways systems of power and privilege work to oppress marginalized groups in society. We will examine how the cycle of power relates to our understanding of the systems of oppression and use this knowledge to develop skills towards dismantling structural bias, discrimination, and injustice.

CHALLENGING BIASED LANGUAGE

Speaker: Shannon McGowan, Ph.D.

MARCH 25, 2020 | PCC, QQ-112 | 12 PM - 1:30 PM

Working together, we will discover how our words signal our values and beliefs and why words matter. Participants will walk away with tangible skills to challenge biased language and an increased understanding of the negative impacts of staying silent.

STRATEGIES FOR INTERRUPTING BIAS

Speaker: Shannon McGowan, Ph.D.

APRIL 21, 2020 | LAC, T-1200 | 12 PM - 1:30 PM

Through interactive practice, we will learn specific strategies to respond to stereotypes, prejudice, and bias. These strategies will better equip participants to respond effectively and appropriately whenever they witness bias. And, when we are better equipped to interrupt bias, we are able to positively impact intergroup relations.
