

NATIVE AMERICAN INDIGENOUS COLLABORATIVE

PEACE MAKING CIRCLES

BECAUSE PEACE-MAKING STARTS WITHIN...

WHAT IS THE WEATHER BETWEEN YOUR EARS?

PEACE MAKING CIRCLES ARE OPEN TO ALL LBCC STUDENTS, FACULTY, STAFF & COMMUNITY

Generational trauma and displacement are heavy burdens to carry. Often, we do not know how to begin the healing.

Peace-making circles promote individual and collective healing. Based on indigenous customs, Peacemaking Circles* provide a safe space for honest dialogue.

Knowledge, Action, Healing.

"As you focus on clearing your generational trauma, don't forget to claim your generational strengths. Your ancestors gave you more than just wounds." - Xavier Dagba

We are eager to bring back Dr. Thomas Reed, CSULB American Indian Studies Department Associate Professor.

His recent dissertation on community-based research, de-colonizing healing practices and the sacred medicine wheel has transformed into LBCC's Peace Making Circles.
