

Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow
by Paul Botello

"Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" is a mural created by esteemed Chicano artist Paul Botello in collaboration with LBCC students to celebrate cultural diversity, resilience, and unity. Centered on an indigenous Tongva woman transforming into the Tree of Life, the artwork symbolizes the connection between nature, community, and hope for future generations.

Building M - Mana

The MANA Program's box design was created by our very own student Markus Lim. Our box represents the various aspects of the Asian, Pacific Islander, and Desi population, the students we directly serve. It encompasses vibrant, colorful, and symbolic elements that showcase the power and love for our diverse community.

Building V - Math Success Center

Blending art, mathematics, and meaning, "Everything is a Sine Wave" illustrates the beauty of patterns found in nature and life, from the golden spiral of the monarch butterfly to the rhythmic waves that unite sound, light, and growth.

Building D - Science Resource Center

Our design highlights the diverse science disciplines taught in the D Building while honoring the sunsetting of the DESTINO Title V grant. It celebrates community, connection and inclusion, reflecting a shared sense of belonging in STEM and the message embodied in our quote: "I matter, you matter, we matter."

Building C - SAGE Scholars Academy

Our SAGE Scholars Academy Emergency Box will feature the Sankofa Bird which is our club logo and an Adinkra Symbol from the Twi language of Ghana. SAGE is the acronym for Sankofa Adjustments with Great Expectations.

Building A - Spotlight Theatre Club

Shayla Perez, a former Theatre Arts student, created this design to serve as an inspiration for other students to join Spotlight Theatre Club.

Building L - OLET

Our emergency box reflects ITS and OLET by blending technology, learning, campus life, and nature. It features elements like campus bunnies, cats, ITS golf carts, multimedia, help desks, and online learning. It symbolizes how we work together daily to support our students.
